Participant Stipend Payment & Acknowledgement

Participant Stipends are generally an amount paid for the benefit of an individual to aid in the pursuit of the recipient's academic study or initiated research. Participant Stipend awards are for scholarly study or research by postdoctoral scholars, and undergraduate and graduate students at the UNIVERSITY or at other locations in conjunction with UNIVERSITY academic programs.

If you are the recipient of a participant stipend award, all or part of the amounts received may be tax-free. Participant Stipend awards are treated as tax-free if the following conditions are met:

- Undergraduate or graduate student must be a candidate for a degree at the UNIVERSITY;
- Amounts received are used for tuition and fees required for enrollment or attendance at the educational institution, or for fees, books, supplies, and equipment required for courses at the educational institution, referred to as "support payments"; and
- The award does not represent payment for teaching, research, or other services required as a condition for receiving the payment. Exceptions. The payment for teaching, research, or other services are tax-free if the funds are received under:
 - The National Health Service Corps Scholarship Program, or
 - The Armed Forces Health Professions Scholarship and Financial Assistance Program.

(If a student receives awards that would cause their total aid from all sources to exceed the cost of attendance (COA), then adjustments must be made. To the extent possible, the financial aid office will reduce and/or replace unmet need first, then loans and work-study prior to adjusting any other grants or scholarships. In general, unless the award is considered wages, it is other financial assistance and must be factored in.)

Participant stipends are taxable if the funds are used for incidental expenses, such as room and board, travel, and optional equipment, and generally amounts received as payments for teaching, research, or other services required as a condition for receiving the participant stipend.

Participant stipend payments are nonwage payments because the recipient is not performing a service for the benefit of CPPF. In many cases, a participant stipend award is paid in a summer outreach and enrichment program. Service refers to teaching, research, or other work that the recipient must agree to perform in order to obtain the stipend award. Service does not include research initiated by the recipient, research primarily for the training of the participant, or such incidental activities such as preparing progress reports or giving a speech on the results of the recipient's research. A service is not constituted by a general condition that the recipient comply with degree requirements even though the person is required to teach or engage in research in order to obtain the degree. If the terms of the award require the recipient to provide a service, the person must be an employee of CPPF and paid a salary or wage for the service provided.

CPPF will withhold federal income tax from participant stipend payments to nonresident aliens unless the person can claim partial or total exemption. A nonresident alien who claims a partial or total exemption from federal income taxes is responsible for providing documentation in support of his or her claim. CPPF will review all claims for exemption on a case by case basis to determine the amount, if any, of the payment that is exempt from income tax. Penalties and interest can be severe for not following Internal Revenue Service (IRS) withholding and reporting requirements. The payment for such liabilities is the responsibility of CPPF.

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) does not require CPPF to report participant stipend award payment amounts to either the recipient or the IRS. It is entirely the responsibility of the recipient to report any taxable income. We encourage you to review IRS Publication 970 – Tax Benefits for Education and consult with a professional tax advisor.
